MESSAGE FROM THE VICE CHANCELLOR, NLU DELHI

“If education is identical with information, the libraries are the greatest sages in the world and encyclopedias are the Rishis.”

- Swami Vivekananda

I am extremely delighted to announce the launch of the Joint Masters/LL.M. Programme in Intellectual Property (IP) Law and Management by National Law University Delhi. Echoing the above quote, the aim and vision of this degree programme is to move beyond the conventional constraints of education centered primarily around content delivery and focus on enabling students to actualise their full potential in order to contribute to the field and the society in general. We, at NLU Delhi, are now making it possible for many aspiring students to build a career in IP by way of a specialised Masters Degree Programme, which is global in its reach, cutting-edge in its content and path-breaking in its pedagogical approach. Being a multidisciplinary university focused on law, an interdisciplinary programme in IP law has been purposefully blended with the core IP management practices. It is my firm belief that it will raise the bar in achieving unparalleled academic excellence.

By jointly collaborating with the World Intellectual Property Organisation (WIPO) - a specialised agency of the United Nations (UN) on Intellectual Property, and the Office of the Controller General of Patents, Designs and Trade Marks (CGPDTM), which is the Intellectual Property Office of the Government of India, we are bridging the gap between expectations of the society, demands of the profession and skill-sets imparted. NLU Delhi, I am sure, is well-positioned to deliver on the synergies created by collaborating with the prestigious partnering institutions. This assurance rides on the background of NLU Delhi's academic rankings and reputation (currently ranked No. 2 in NIRF) as an institution striving to achieve higher levels of academic consciousness. Continuing with its traditions of enabling excellence in higher education, NLU Delhi students have achieved various prestigious scholarships, including the Rhodes and Cambridge fellowships, particularly in the field of IP, apart from excellent in-house practitioners, litigators and other IP professionals.

In recent times, NLU Delhi has also launched several landmark initiatives such as Ekalavya - a research affiliation programme - for scholars to conduct research, international visitors programme - an initiative to attract faculty from India and abroad, Abhyasa - an initiative to involve practitioners in imparting practical skills to students, Anubhuti - an initiative for students to work with various centres/chairs and faculty driven research projects at NLU Delhi, and Saksham - an initiative to enable students, including students with disability, to cope up to the needs of the academic programme. In my opinion, these remarkable initiatives by NLU Delhi herald new ways of thinking about education in general and legal education in particular.

I am reminded of the solemn promise that education is meant to transform human beings by expanding their horizons and causing paradigm shifts in the thought process. We believe this is reflected through the core values of education at NLU Delhi. Any candidate equipped with Joint Masters/LL.M. in IP Law and Management will be able to see a very different world with not only career opportunities in IP law through a LL.M. degree, but candidates from non-legal backgrounds will find themselves well-positioned to deal with IP careers in the real-world which often cross-cuts many areas of technology, business and entrepreneurship. What this programme offers is very exceptional and unique in the academic sphere and I am proud that NLU Delhi has been at the forefront of institutional partnerships to deliver on the programme in this region. Not only candidates from India will benefit through future opportunities by enrolling in this programme, but foreign students will especially benefit as they will be able to stand out in their respective countries through expertise, leadership and dynamism instilled in them after taking this programme. I am sure that the officials of the CGPDTM, Government of India taking the course will find it enriching.

I wish the aspirants all success in seeking admission to the Joint Masters/LL.M. Programme at NLU Delhi!
